As Wakefield Passengers Awaited Rescue at Sea

Passengers of the navy transport Wakefield—once the $10,000,000 liner Manhattan—are pictured on the ship's rear decks somewhere in the Atlantic awaiting rescue as flames swept through the vessel. The navy said a checkup showed the crew and passengers, totaling about 1,500, had been saved. (AP Photo.)

Survivors of Ship Fire Saved by Heroic Efforts

Passengers Tell Stories of Rescue as Wakefield Burns at Sea; Navy and Marines Helped.

By The Associated Press
AN EAST COAST PORT, Sept. 10.—Survivors of the burned transport Wakefield today gave vivid descriptions of 20 minutes of drama and heroism aboard the smoke-swept ship far out at sea last Thursday night. The hull of the ship was seen to be on fire at an east coast port yesterday.

The passengers included civilian and military personnel of duty at a nearby base. The survivors interviewed here said they had boarded the transport at a European port. All agreed that the crew of a destroyer and other ships making the rescue and the transport displayed exceptional bravery in carrying out their work swiftly and calmly.

Robert Crabtree of Pawtucket, R. I., said the fire appeared to high sides of the Wakefield, smashing her superstructure, and he recalled the words of the destroyer's captain:

"To hell with the bridge—hold her in."

Another survivor described how a company of marines clomped aboard the burning vessel, loaded their rifles and announced that anyone causing a panic would be shot.

While gun crews tossed shells overboard, cargo nets were dropped down the side of the ship to the rescue craft and the passengers and crew went over the side to safety, he said.

"I never saw such work in my life," he said. "It was the greatest exhibition of courage and devotion to duty I ever witnessed. The shipper of the cruiser was probably the calmest man on the Atlantic. He was an inspiration to us and the crew."

Saw Whirl of Smoke

"It was shortly after 7 o'clock Thursday night and I was lying on the deck near the bow of the ship when I saw men looking over the rail. I didn't pay too much attention because I thought they were watching the destroyers or looking for submarines. Then I saw a thin wisp of smoke and, like a lot of others, I thought somebody's mattress had caught fire from a cigarette and that they probably would throw the mattress overboard.

"While I was looking, probably only a matter of two or three minutes, the smoke and fire seemed to race from one end of the transport to the other and completely envelope the ship x x x

"We were headed into the wind, and the skipper quickly hoisted the transport around, so that the wind blew the smoke and flames away from us instead of from stem to bow.

"There were long blasts from the ship's whistle. Distress flags were run up.

"Almost immediately a destroyer and a cruiser started racing to our rescue. Large cargo nets were swung over the side of the burning transport x x x

"Some of the men fell from the net into the water, but it was still light and navy men quickly pulled them from the water onto the destroyer. I don't believe any of the passengers were lost but I am sure a lot of the crew must have been burned, the fire spread so fast.

Officer Badly Burned

"I saw one officer climb out of the hatch, badly burned. He ran blindly toward the railing where other men tried to help him."

A survivor from Maine, who declined to have his name used, said: "We heard a muffled explosion far below deck. Then the fire seemed to spread like a barn full of hay.

"Deckhands and men from the rescue ships began tossing explosives over the side."

"An officer," he said, "shouted at another one, 'how about the forward magazine, has she been flooded?'"

"To my dying day I'll remember the reply: 'Yes, flooded.'"

"And then the first officer said: 'Good work, good work.'"

The Wakefield, named for Washington's birthplace in Westmoreland county, Va., was of 24,289 gross tons and before being taken over by the government had a passenger capacity of 1,300. She was 668 feet in length, had an 86-foot beam and a depth of 33 feet with normal cruising speed of 20 knots. She was of twin-screw type.

At the time of her maiden voyage, Aug. 10, 1932, she was the largest and fastest ship ever built in America. Mrs. Edith Kermit Roosevelt, widow of Theodore Roosevelt, former president, christened the vessel, using a bottle of waters taken from historic spots throughout the country.

The ship was streamlined with a straight raked stem and bulbous bow with a merchant cruiser stern. Two squat funnels and two masts stuck high above her

FALL OF STALINGRAD
REGARDLESS OF COST
DEMANDED BY HITLERGermans Throw Greatest Army of War Against Russian City.

By The Associated Press

Sept. 11—The most powerful army the Germans ever mustered, surpassing even the great force which they flung last year, was reported today to have been committed by Hitler to take Stalingrad at any price. But that he held an army newspaper Red Star said that the axis forces outnumbered those of any previous campaign. Men on both sides participated in the battle for the city, the greatest single engagement of the war. The attackers and defenders were fighting in a maelstrom of fire and smoke, and the fighting was so fierce that the number of men, machines and planes engaged was greater than in any previous battle of the war, but that Volga strongholds "continues to be inaccessible to the enemy."

The mid-day communiqué announced that German armor and rifle divisions infiltrated western defenses of Stalingrad where Nazi shock troops won three more outlying villages yesterday, but more than 100 of the riflemen were slain.

Fighting In South

The fall to the axis of another settlement south of the Volga river industrial center was reported and, for the first time in several days, fighting was reported south of Stalingrad.

Red Star exhorted the troops: "Fight to the last, but keep Stalingrad."

(The Russian feat in holding the Germans from Stalingrad for 17 days after the Von Bock pincers closed upon its approaches is reminiscent of the 27-day defense of Sevastopol against a Nazi offensive which finally overwhelmed that Soviet Black sea naval base last July 4.)

(Stalingrad, however, has none of the natural mountainous barriers such as screened Sevastopol and probably has fewer fixed heavy fortifications. How many men Marshal Semeon Timoshenko has assigned to guard it is a question, but Von Bock's sinking forces, estimated as high as 500,000 troops, are known to outnumber them considerably.)

While heavy defensive fighting and counter-attacks occupied the men of Stalingrad, street engagements raged on at the Black sea port of Novorossiysk. The Russians pursued mopping-up tactics in the Terek valley of the central Caucasus and the Red army of the central front registered new gains, the Russians said.

Three Attacks Repulsed

Red infantrymen before the western gates of Stalingrad were reported to have repulsed three German attacks.

Soviet counter-attacks to the southwest were reported to have accounted for 400 Germans, 11 tanks, nine anti-tank guns and five trucks.

Red Star declared the Germans' original battle plan called for the quick capture of Stalingrad by an abrupt and deep stab into the Red army lines. They broke through to a point from which they directly threatened the city's defense zone, but then were hurled back by a counter-attack, it said.

"The Hitlerite troops crawled to Stalingrad, breathing heavily and bleeding," the newspaper said, "and now are forced to resort to a siege of the city, which is even more exhausting for them."

The Communist party newspaper Pravda insisted it still was possible to stop the Germans, but commented:

"It is necessary to take into consideration the fact that conditions of the war in the west—the lack of a second front in Europe—make it possible for the enemy to send almost all his forces against the Red army and we alone are bearing the blows of the Hitlerite army."

Largest Forces Of War

The Red Star report that the armies involved before Stalingrad were the largest in any battle of the war implied that a total of more than 1,000,000 men was engaged, although the relative axis and Soviet strengths were not listed.

Presumably a constant flow of reinforcements has built the axis force to more than 500,000 men, aided by more than 1,000 planes and hundreds of tanks.

A total of 1,000,000 soldiers for both sides took part last fall in the battle of Moscow, which was previously the greatest encounter of the war.

In addition to the central front action, Red Star said a battle was raging west of Moscow for a strongly-fortified German position. This point, it added, was in the elbow of an undisciplined river on a road linking several Nazi fortified positions.

The Red army hurled tanks and infantry into this attack. After overcoming initial Nazi resistance, the Russians were reported clearing the Germans out, building up building.

Here is the man who beat Gov. Eugene Talmadge for the Democratic nomination for governor of Georgia. He is Ellis Arnall, 55-year-old attorney general of the state. Talmadge has served three terms as governor of the state and has been in public office 25 years. Arnall, admitted to law practice in 1901, went to the Georgia house of representatives in 1914. DUSSELDORF IS RAID TARGETHundreds of RAF Planes Attack Nazi Steel City for Fiftieth Time.

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Sept. 11—Hundreds of British bombers unloaded a terrific weight of high explosives over Dusseldorf last night, spreading the destruction wrought in that important German industrial city in 49 previous raids.

Other targets in western Germany also were attacked during the night operations, which the British said had cost the RAF 31 planes.

The exact number of aircraft which participated in the assault on Dusseldorf was not disclosed, but from first reports it seemed probable that it exceeded the total employed in the last great attack on that city July 31.

Thirty planes were lost in that raid.

Dusseldorf, 24 miles from Cologne on the right bank of the Rhine, is a center of metallurgical, machinery and chemical industries.

The attack came after a one-night lull in the British air offensive during which Russian bombers kept up the pounding of Germany by raiding Berlin, Badapost and Koenigsberg.

Russian reports on the Soviet raids Wednesday night, when bad weather in the west kept the RAF at home, said that 38 fires were started in Badapost, 12 in Berlin and 16 in Koenigsberg. Moscow reported the loss of two bombers.

Britain again was raid-free last night, but early today two Nazi raiders—believed to have been Focke-Wulf 190 fighters—swooped over the southeast coast and dropped several bombs in an orchard causing some damage to nearby houses. Spitfires chased the raiders off.

MOBILIZATION TEST
SHOWS IMPROVEMENTCivilian Defense Officials Plan Larger Tryout Soon.

A full-scale test mobilization next week, including the signal for a blackout, is being mapped following what Civilian Defense Coordinator William R. Martin reported to be a "considerably improved" mobilization last night.

Next week's plan will not involve a blackout, but will include the blackout signal to familiarize the public with the sound of the bombs which someday may warn the city to become completely dark.

The date of the mobilization and detailed plans will be announced early in the week, probably by Monday, Mr. Martin said.

Last night's test, using telephones to notify the civilian defense units, showed every unit to be "greatly improved," the coordinator said.

Unit chiefs were called at 8:30 p. m. from the city police station and they in turn set about notifying their members by telephone. At 9:30 factory whistles signaled the "all clear."

The air raid wardens and their assistants made double use of the mobilization.

In addition to their patrol duty practice they endeavored to make a house-to-house canvass of their districts in the interest of the scrap metal campaign which started this morning.

MADAGASCARChurchill Reports French Offer
Little Resistance to Attack on Island.

By The Associated Press
LONDON, Sept. 11—British forces, encountering but little resistance and suffering small losses, have captured the three west coast ports on the French island of Madagascar against which operations were started yesterday, Prime Minister Churchill informed the house of commons today.

It was an all-empire undertaking, without participation of the Egyptian French, a British military commentator said. This informant placed the strength of the Vichy garrison on the island at no more than 10,000 troops.

(Reports to Vichy said that defense strength totaled about 1,500 men against an invasion force of two divisions, some 30,000 men, and that little more than token resistance was made.)

Japanese reconnaissance planes recently had been sighted over the island, asserted the British commentator who cannot otherwise be identified. He surmised they came from an aircraft carrier since, he said, the Japanese have no air base within reach of Madagascar.

Negotiations Fall
Although negotiations had been going on between British foreign office representatives and the island government for some time, a foreign office source said, "it was apparent that there could be no real basis for negotiation so long as axis pressure on Vichy continued."

The ports were Ambanja, 120 miles southwest of the British-held Diego Suarez naval base; Majunga, 200 miles farther down the coast; and Morondava, another 370 miles south.

"The operation, in which all three services cooperated, was carried out precisely according to plan," the prime minister announced.

British land, sea and air units made the attacks, with the full approval of the United States government, in an effort to wrest complete control of the big island from the Vichy government and eliminate it as a possible base for axis submarines and axis espionage agents athwart allied supply lines.

Reports from Vichy confirmed the prime minister's announcement. These said the west coast ports of Majunga and Morondava had been captured and that British motorized columns are advancing on Tananarive, the inland capital of Madagascar.

Majunga is the largest port in Madagascar and is the gateway to Tananarive, the inland capital. It has a harbor capable of sheltering a considerable naval force.

Ambanja is important strategically because it is situated on the main highway running from Diego Suarez, while Morondava virtually controls the southern end of the straits of Morambique, between Madagascar and the east African coast.

There are no harbors of any consequence on the east side of the island.

Churchill opened his address with a statement that the government "recently decided to resume operations in Madagascar and seize the key points from which enemy submarines might operate."

President To Put Rubber
Plan in Effect by MondaySome Phases, Such as Gas Rationing, However, Likely To Be Delayed Some Time.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11—President Roosevelt said today he hoped by Monday to put into effect practically all the recommendations of a special committee which studied the vital rubber problem and recommended nontionable gasoline rationing.

The Chief Executive indicated at a press conference that it might take some time, however, to put into effect this rationing recommendation. He said it would take time to set up the machinery, which should be handled by local boards.

A fellow's neighbor, the President said, is the best judge of whether he is using his car properly.

The rubber committee submitted a report to Mr. Roosevelt yesterday, recommending not only gasoline rationing but also other restrictions on private driving, such as a universal 35-mile speed limit and the limiting of average car mileage to 5,000 a year, and that for essential purposes only.

More Synthetic Rubber
The committee also proposed complete reorganization of the government's administration of the rubber program and a large expansion in production of synthetic rubber.

Sir Roosevelt told the press conference that he expected by Monday to have the name of a new rubber administrator who would serve within the framework of the war production board. He said he had already discussed the appointment with WPA Chairman Donald M. Nelson, but he would give no clue as to the prospective choice.

The President said he expected, without exception, to put into operation the program of the special rubber committee, which was headed by Bernard M. Baruch, chairman of the war industries board in the last world conflict.

Mr. Roosevelt preferred, however, not to use the term gas rationing, since he said what actually was contemplated was rationing of tires and mileage by some method, such as permitting only enough gasoline for drivers to operate for a specific number of miles. There had been some talk, he said, of reading automobile meters but he said too many people knew how to "fix" them.

He thought no legislation was needed, he added, to put the program into operation.

Tells of Test
With reference to the proposal to limit speeds to 35 miles an hour, the Chief Executive commented on the fact that he and others had urged a reduction in driving speeds but that the requests were not being met.

By way of illustrating that fact, he said he had tried an experiment the other day in the vicinity of his home at Hyde Park, N. Y. He said he drove to nearby Rhinebeck and then made a 12-mile run down the Albany Post road. As usual, he said a secret service car followed behind, bristling with machine guns, and also a car of state troopers, following the customary practice of permitting no automobile to pass that of the President. He cut his speed to 35 and held it there, and whereas no cars were in sight behind him when he started the test, 22 were strung out in a line when he turned into the gate of his estate 12 miles down the highway. Every one of those 22 cars, Mr. Roosevelt said, had been going more than 35 miles an hour.

Harding High Graduate
Miss Long, a graduate of Harding high school in 1932 (and of Mt. Sinai hospital school of nursing in Cleveland in 1941), has been doing general duty nursing at Mt. Sinai for the last year. She enlisted recently at Cleveland and is home now for a visit with her parents before going into service.

Miss Lavitchka's acceptance ends a virtual "campaign" which she started last November to convince the army that stature and weight have nothing to do with

DELAWARE MEN
IN SMASHUP
ON STATE ST.B. F. Witten Killed Instantly;
Other Three in Serious Condition.

Benjamin Franklin Witten, about 44, of Delaware, a guard at the Selby Ordnance Plant, was killed instantly and three other Delaware men also employed as guards at the war plant were seriously injured when their auto was struck by a west-bound Free passenger trolley at the Erie crossing on North State street last night at 9:35.

Those injured are

William Mumfield, 38, driver of the auto.
J. A. Watts, 62, a passenger.
Rollin K. Jacobs, 53, also a passenger.

Officials at the Marion City hospital today said injuries of the three men had not yet been determined. X-ray examinations of all three some time today were expected to show more definitely the extent of their injuries.

Skull Fractured
Witten suffered a fractured skull, fractured right arm above the elbow, chest injuries below the third rib and body bruises and abrasions. The M. J. Gauder & Sons ambulance attendants said that Witten was dead when they placed him on a stretcher shortly after the accident.

Thrown from Car
He, along with Mumfield, was hurled about 20 feet west of the grade crossing along the railroad right-of-way.

Witten is survived by his wife, Maude, who is now in a Huntington, W. Va., hospital recovering from a major operation. The victim, a Delaware resident for the last nine years, was employed there as a filling station attendant before becoming a guard at the Selby Ordnance Plant.

The body was removed to the Morrison funeral home in Delaware. Funeral arrangements will be completed later.

Police and railroad officials investigating the accident said Mumfield, driver of the auto, failed to see the warning signals of Thomas A. Rizer of 440 Avondale avenue, grade crossing watchman. Both police and railroad authorities said Rizer was in the middle of North State street signaling the approach of the train. An Erie spokesman said that the railroad's investigation revealed that the auto was approaching the crossing at a high rate of speed. Rizer jumped to avoid being struck by the car.

On Way To Work
The men were on their way to work at the ordnance plant at the time of the accident and were northbound.

Police officials said today that the auto struck the left front corner of the engine. The train, going between 40 and 45 miles per hour, hurled the car over. It came to rest at the northeast corner of the Houghson Sulky Co. building.

Both Witten and Mumfield apparently were hurled through the roof of the auto. Jacobs and Watts were pinned in the rear seat by a part of the auto motor. The front seats and the crushed body.

The entire engine block was torn from its fastenings and was hurled about 50 feet west of the crossing.

When police and ambulance attendants arrived they extricated Watts and Jacobs from the rear seat. According to one spectator who was at the scene immediately following the mishap, both of them were pinned under part of the wreckage. Patrolmen had to lift part of the auto to release the men.

The body of Witten landed between the rails of a siding along side of the Houghson Sulky Co. while Mumfield landed almost against the building.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—Prime Minister Churchill today charged that day that Japan and Japan's 150,000 soldiers may have been behind the All-India Congress party drive for freedom, independence, but he told the house of commons that the course of events in India was improving and is, on the whole, reassuring.

A jangling old clock is absolutely new as reported by Bert Gable.

One morning when Bert Gable was in the shop at Marion's downtown district, he was approached by a man who said he had a clock which he had just bought at a sale.

"To think that a clock could be so old and still be so good," Bert said, "is a thing of which I am proud."

For ten years, Bert said, he had owned the clock, and it had never given him any trouble. It was a jangling old clock, but it was a clock, and it was a clock that had been in the shop for ten years.

for Heroism by Navy
By The Associated Press
ANNAPOLIS, Md., Sept. 10—The navy cited for heroism Commander Arthur J. White, a former Ohioan, who refused to abandon the aircraft carrier Lexington although both ankles and a shoulder were fractured by blasts which doomed the ship in the Coral Sea battle.
White, a former resident of West Leipsic, Putnam county, O., was awarded the naval cross yesterday at the U. S. naval academy, where he now is stationed.
The middle-aged physician, wounded in the first of two explosions which hastened the ship's end, twice moved his patients from shattered dressing stations and refused to heed entreaties to quit his post until all patients had been removed to a rescue ship.

MIDDLETOWN, O., Sept. 10—The American Rolling Mill Co. plans to appeal a national labor relations board decision involving workers at its Ashland, Ky., plant, an ARMCO spokesman reported today. The board ordered the plant yesterday to cease dis-encouragement of membership in a CIO union, to disestablish an independent employees' group, and to reinstate with back pay 21 workers the board held to have been discharged for union activity.

Stalingrad Faces Greatest Siege Force in History

By DEWITT MacKENZIE, Wide World War Analyst.

The battle of Stalingrad is a turning point in the history of the war. The weight of armaments never before involved in the siege of a single city is being brought to bear upon it. One of the most important elements of the German attack is the use of heavy artillery. The German high command has concentrated a vast amount of heavy guns and mortars upon the city. The Russian defense is equally determined. The city is being defended by a force of 100,000 men, including the 62nd Army and the 13th Air Army. The battle is expected to last for many months.

Reds Counterattack

The Reds again are counterattacking at Novorossiysk against Hitler's forces which have driven into the city defenses of this important Black Sea naval base—the last big port left to the Russians.

Stalingrad Faces Greatest Siege Force in History

By DEWITT MacKENZIE, Wide World War Analyst.

The battle of Stalingrad is a turning point in the history of the war. The weight of armaments never before involved in the siege of a single city is being brought to bear upon it. One of the most important elements of the German attack is the use of heavy artillery. The German high command has concentrated a vast amount of heavy guns and mortars upon the city. The Russian defense is equally determined. The city is being defended by a force of 100,000 men, including the 62nd Army and the 13th Air Army. The battle is expected to last for many months.

Reds Counterattack

The Reds again are counterattacking at Novorossiysk against Hitler's forces which have driven into the city defenses of this important Black Sea naval base—the last big port left to the Russians.

Rooneys Separate

Married last Jan. 10, Mackey Rooney, 21-year-old screen actor, and his wife, the former Ava Gardner of London, N. Y., have separated. Rooney, 34, is the elder of our two stars. Mrs. Rooney admitted a 110-pound weight.

"BRAT" IS HERO

By police radio officials of the State Ordnance Plant and the Marion Quartermaster depot were called to the scene and offered their assistance to the night commander and airport officials.

Soldiers on Guard

A squad of men of the 2nd Battalion, 332nd Engineers Regiment stationed east of "C" was sent to the airport and was on guard duty throughout the night and until shortly before 10 this morning. They stood guard at the plane and around the airport. Traffic on the airport road was not permitted beyond the first crossroad east of the airport.

NEW HOSPITAL SCHEDULE SET

Rules and Hours for Visiting Revised for Welfare of Patients.

For the welfare of patients at Marion's crowded City hospital, a revised schedule of visiting hours was established today and a request was made that only families visit the patients.

In announcing visiting hours, Mrs. Mary J. Taylor, superintendent, asked that visitors no longer use the side entrance to the hospital when visiting a patient and instead use the main entrance, Delaware avenue entrance and inquire at the desk before going to the room.

Mrs. Taylor asked that friends wait to make their calls after the patient returns home, limiting their expressions during the hospitalization period to cards, letters, flowers and other gifts.

The measures were taken, she explained, for the good of the patients.

With the census at 50 or above most of the time and a minimum of private rooms available, the confusion of visitors in the rooms and halls is detrimental to the patient, both from the standpoint of noise and from the fact that the nurses and aides are hampered in their work in the rooms and in moving about the hospital.

Under the new regulations patients in private rooms may have visitors from 10 a. m. to 12 noon, 1 to 4 p. m., and 7 to 9 p. m. Those in wards and semi-private rooms may be visited from 1 to 3:30 p. m. and 7 to 9:30 p. m. Maternity patients may have visitors from 10 to 11:30 a. m. and from 1 to 3:30 and 7 to 9:30 p. m.

"We will never deprive families of playing with a patient if their presence is needed and as always we will call families of patients who ask for them," Mrs. Taylor said.

Some patients have had visitors against their physicians' orders, she said, because the visitors entered the hospital through the side doors and did not inquire at the desk as to the patient's condition.

WILDERNESS GIRL

By LETA ZOE ADAMS

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX Cross-Purposes

TYRA's father walked briskly into the camp, snapped out his flashlight, and stirred up the embers of the fire.

"Well, we put it over, chick," he observed, as he worked. "But I'm not so sure we would have been successful if you hadn't sided with me, so promptly. Morose was hesitating, and I could see the other two were ready to veto my offer if Morose gave them a chance. Good work, chick. You've saved our claim."

Tyra had come up to the fire. She stared into it, her face grave. "I wish I hadn't done it."

Fleming straightened, looking steadily at her. "Wish you hadn't? What the deuce do you mean, chick? You didn't do anything to be ashamed of."

"Maybe not, Dad. Still..."

"Still what?"

"He might have misunderstood," she hesitated, then went on quickly, "I almost went back to tell him."

"To tell him what?"

"That I didn't mean it the way it looked."

"Hokey!" Fleming expostulated. Then he glanced at Tyra more sharply.

"The way it looked. What do you mean, chick?"

Tyra talked to the fire, not looking at her father. "I didn't want to influence him—because I wanted the chance to stay here and clean up our claim."

"Dad, I—did it because—I wanted to keep Sandy from going back to the Chamber of the Serpent."

"God?"

"I'm beginning to savvy," Fleming said dryly, and flung aside the stick he had been using to poke the fire. "You aren't interested in cleaning up that pocket."

"You only care about Sandy Morose's hide. You didn't tell me that, chick. You didn't say you were in love with him."

"Annihilate spread over Tyra's face. 'I know I didn't, Dad, because—I couldn't so long as he was under suspicion. I couldn't even let myself think I—loved him—until I knew he wasn't after gold, up here.'"

Mr. Fleming said huskily, "I expected this would happen some day."

"You're not sorry, are you, Dad?"

"No, Sandy Morose is probably as good as they come but it means the break-up of all our years of wandering together, Tyra."

On the Shelf

Tyra's eyes rested on the grizzled head and seemed face. She said gently, "You wouldn't want to keep up this pace much longer anyway, would you, Dad? We'll have enough so you can buy a little place in Southern California."

He gave a short laugh. "Putting the old man on the shelf, eh? Chick, you know I'd go crazy on a 'little place.' I'll die with my boots on, but don't you worry. I want you to be happy and if Sandy Morose is the fellow to do it, you won't find me playing a heavy father role."

He came around the fire, then, and laid a hand upon Tyra's shoulder. "Go to bed now, chick. You've had a long day. And tomorrow is another."

But Tyra did not go into her hut at once. When her father vanished she walked to the edge of the camp and peered into the darkness.

The plateau had always been quiet at night, but to Tyra's active imagination a dream-like stillness hung over the place now. Presently when an owl hooted far up in some nearby tree, a shudder passed through her body.

For she knew the Indians' superstition about a hooting owl foretelling a death.

A horrible thought came to her. Suppose Sandy had only pretended to acquiesce in her father's plan. Suppose, as soon as they had gone, he and Gil had started for the Mayan city, forestalling any further delay?

Tyra recalled how Sandy had not even turned to tell her good-night when she left his camp. And, only today, he had told her that the finding of the Mayan codex meant more to him than anything in life!

Tyra's feet were taking her farther from camp. She groped through the blackness as through a heavy fog. Once she bumped into a tree trunk, another time she brought up in a clump of bamboo. She came, at last, to the border of Sandy's camp. All was silent there, the trees insect-proof tents tightly closed. But, and uneasy, Tyra slipped around to the back of Sandy's tent.

As she moved a flicker of something bright against the black curtain of the tent caught and held her attention. She was certain it was an electric torch. Again she saw the flicker of light. It must be a long way off, she reflected. Maybe an insect of the firefly type. Or the eye of a jungle cat.

Visitor

After a moment it was gone and did not return. Tyra crept closer to Sandy's tent. She crouched to listen and the relief she felt was like a wash of cool water upon her overstrained nerves when she heard Sandy's rhythmic breathing.

Noisily she stole away, back to her own camp, ashamed of her own fear, ashamed that she had questioned Sandy's promise, made to her and her father.

Still she could not sleep. She tossed restlessly, her thoughts spinning. And long before dawn she knew that she had to put herself right with Sandy before she would ever be able to rest again.

She had to hear him say that the suspicions she had held against him made no difference in his feeling for her. After that, everything would be all right.

She nestled a hand under her cheek and smiled dreamily. In that posture she finally slept.

Tyra's father was standing at her that it was time to get up. She scrambled from the crudely-made bunk, pulled on her brief costume for the day, ran a comb through her hair hastily before tying it under a scarf, and hurried out to the stream to wash. The sun was already up, shining somewhat above the lofty trees, shedding only a dim light upon the camp. Tyra frowned her less and feet in the cool water, thinking of how she would greet Sandy when he came.

Then, glancing up suddenly, she saw him. He stood on the other side of the little stream, watching her. He saluted and Tyra's heart contracted with a happiness that was almost pain.

"The Dryads are abroad, I see," he called. "I'm coming over."

He leaped the stream but fell short of the bank by inches. Tyra laughed. She could not help it. "Aren't you early?" she asked.

"And where are Gil and Helen?" "I left Gil to strike camp."

Tyra dangled a slim foot in the water. "I have a confession to make. Last night I went back to your camp. I was afraid you'd gone to the Chamber of the Serpent."

"Afraid?"

There was a sharp, almost warning note in the way he uttered the single word.

NEW TAPIOCA SOURCE FOUND

University Research Reveals
S. Starch Similar To That from Java.

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
World Science Editor
New York, N. Y.—The Japanese have discovered a new source of starch in Java and the Philippines.

The starch is equal to or better than that which came from the Philippines, and was discovered in a small grove of cornucopious canebrakes where the tall tapioca plants are made from the starch of the root. Like rubber,
tapioca is native to the East Indies,
and the Japanese name.

New Cows for Norway

Telemark Cow from the Reilly Herd

By CHARLES E. WHITING
Wide World Features BLAIRSTOWN, N. J.—When the Nazi invaders drove out of Norway, sturdy little cattle born and bred in New Jersey may be sent to restock the herds now slaughtered for German troops or shipped to Germany to bolster the dwindling food supply in the reich.

That is the belief of dairymen who have watched the experiment of a New York shipping magnate with a penchant for livestock farming. He hopes to develop a "truly American" breed with the help of Norway's famous Telemark cattle.

The experimenter is John D.
Reilly, president of the Todd Shipyards Corp., and the project is being conducted at his farm near here.

Reilly's herd might be more significant than we realize, for if the Germans have ravaged the Telemarks in Norway for food, there is a possibility they might become extinct before the war is over. Then, this American herd might be needed for rehabilitation purposes.

Reilly says, "the average American cow is too large, demands too great an investment in upkeep, and yields too much milk for the needs of the average rural family."

The Telemark cattle are small,
short-legged and rugged animals,
red and white in color and further identified by a broad white stripe along the spine and croup.
Their home is the mountainous valleys in the Telemark region along the fjords north of Bergen.

"It is an animal which is accustomed to 'rustling' much of its own feed on the mountainsides," said Reilly, "and it will withstand climatic changes in this country."

Economically, the Telemarks are profitable. Comparatively light eaters, their milk production also stacks up favorably with other breeds.

Oliver Brugler, Reilly's farm manager, said the average milk production per cow is 20 to 27 pounds per day, with a butterfat content of approximately four per cent.
